Path to Agnosticism Adam Darr

Food for thought: through this rare personal account into the search for a reason to believe in the god of religions, the author examines the thought process of one individual seeking God or truth . He reveals why there is such confusion over religions when really it is this life we should be accepting, not eternal life. After all, of God , nothing can be known. So what does it mean to have a vocation? What happens when you are alone with just your thoughts in the monastic cell? Can we believe that what is given to be the word of God is really more than human invention? Or are all of these confused beliefs simply man-made? Why should any god want to create mystery? Why should there be miracles connected with relatively inconsequential things whilst more important matters are uncared for? How should we treat the fables which are repeated as truth? With rational examination of scripture the author is led to what is beyond belief and hence to agnosticism. He travels along what is sometimes an agonising path concerning the basis for belief in the god of religions as he addresses some of these questions. Once it was believed that God was at work in our daily lives but now many maintain their religious practices to avoid social exclusion.
