Meg Pryor is about to give up on trying to come up with the perfect plan for her date with Drew when she notices a flier for the annual St. Catherine's Spring Fair. Meg can't imagine a better night than cuddling with Drew on the Ferris wheel, and despite her best friend Roxanne's warning that a college guy might not be thrilled about attending a church fair, Meg has her heart set on going -- after all, the Pryors have gone every year since before Meg was born, and she's not going to miss it.

Meg is devastated to learn that the fair is in danger of closing unless attendance picks up -- and with Bob Dylan playing in town, things don't look good for St. Catherine's. Meg is determined to find a way to save the fair. But with American Bandstand commitments, boyfriend dilemmas, and a best friend who is always getting her into trouble, will Meg be able to impress Drew and save the fair?
