Children with Special Needs: Rudolf Steiner's Approach Michael Luxford

This is a concise introduction to Rudolf Steiner's ideas on the development and education of children with special needs. Steiner's insights have led to the creation of special needs schools, communities and villages around the world. Camphill, an important part of this network, exists on four continents. This little guide, illustrated throughout with colour photographs, gives an overview of the development of the child, educational options and therapies for special needs, and special topics such as adolescence.
