Groundwater Vulnerability in Developing Commonwealth Countries: Case Studies

This publication is a collection of reports on case studies carried out across Commonwealth countries, looking at good groundwater protection practice, areas which need improvement, and areas where practice is poor. All the reports are country-based. Each looks at a generic national problem, but focuses on a particular area to highlight the problems and investigate possible solutions. All the reports use the capital city or state, except the India report, which is based on a city-state.
