Thinking of You

THINKING OF YOU

Thoughts of you surround me like a wreath of fragrant joy.

It is a special gift to view the world through the eyes of a child. Few things in life inspire us to stop and reflect as children do: few things evoke the spirit of wonder and innocence that they do. Beyond their outer beauty, children possess internal qualities that God wants us to hold on to as adults; it is their tender, humble hearts He calls us to embrace.

For as long as I can remember, I've wanted to preserve the treasures that exist in that short whisper of time called childhood. I always thought that a career in psychology would accomplish this goal; God had other plans. I was pursuing a graduate degree as a clinical psychologist when, after several miscarriages, we were blessed with the birth of our daughter, Morgan Brittany. All of my professional ambitions and goals quickly took second place to my responsibilities as a mother and my commitment to this new life. I longed above all things to stay home and invest everything I was, knew, and believed in into my daughter. My husband, Ray, and I knew it was time to painful realities stood in the way of doing what we thought was right.

I still remember the day Ray asked me to join him in praying that God would provide an income-producing avenue that would enable me to stay home with our daughter. Little did we know that within a period of three weeks, the Lord would bring about opportunities in a field that I loved - Photography. Through no advertisement and nothing short of divine intervention, the business grew, beyond what we could ever have imagined.

My prayers is that these images will serve as small reminders of the things that are truly important and inspire us to embrace, with humble and tender hearts, a spirit of commitment to God and our families.
